

MILLIE ENGONO

PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

Based in Berlin, Millie Engono is a Spanish model and actor of African heritage with over ten years of professional experience, working primarily in Spain and Germany. She holds a Bachelor's degree in Communication Design and began gaining on-camera experience in her late teens. One of her first projects was appearing in Jack White's music video for "I'm Shakin'," as the double of American recording artist Ruby Amanfu. Since then, Millie has built a diverse body of work across theatre, commercials, television, and film, collaborating with acclaimed directors, production companies, and leading brands on a wide range of projects.

Her acting experience has developed through years of working across different formats and creative environments, shaping a natural and instinctive approach to performance. Millie is particularly known for her strong improvisational ability, comedic sensibility, natural sense of timing, expressive body movement, and singing. Fluent in Spanish (Native), Catalan (Native), and English (C1), Millie brings versatility to every production, both on- and off-screen. She also speaks conversational German (B2), allowing her to work comfortably in multilingual environments. Her experience in front of the camera, combined with her background in dance improvisation and performance, allows her to adapt quickly to different characters, directions, and working environments while bringing authenticity and energy, and a collaborative spirit to each project.
